LITTLE BUCKAROO

LITTLE PEDRO was the happiest boy in Texas the day his father, Big Joe got a job on the Diamond spread. Everyone knew that only the best buckeroos were taken on at Diamond's, and Pedro was very proud of his father.

In the evening, Pedro loved to listen to the cowboys sing songs and tell stories. Big Joe would walk with him to the main bunkhouse where the ranch hands gathered. Pedro enjoyed the lively get-togethers. He hoped that one day when his father got to know everyone better, he would sing some of the old Vaquero songs for everybody.

The Vaqueros were Spanish cowboys, some of the first New World settlers. They lassoed the steers with loops of twisted rawhide called "la reata". The American cowboys joined "la reata" into one word . . . lariat. Pedro was anxious to show his new friends the reata his father had made for him.

"Tomorrow may I run over to the bunkhouse and show them my reata?" Pedro asked his father when they were walking home.

"If you would like to," Big Joe answered. "But you must promise not to stay there too long. I do not want you bothering the men when they have work to do."

"I will go after chow time, and I promise not to stay too long. Thank you, father. Thank you very much."

And so, the following evening, Pedro hurried over to the bunkhouse where the cowhands gave him a warm greeting.

They admired little Pedro's lasso, and he showed them the few tricks he had learned to do with it.

"We should take him along at spring roundup time," said Tom Dixon admiringly.

Pedro's heart pounded joyfully, even though he knew he would never be allowed out on the range by either his mother or father during roundup. That's why he was so startled when a tall cowpoke called Rusty suddenly got angry.

"You must be crazy!", he barked back. "We don't want any kids messing up the job."

"I was only kidding," Tom explained. "Nothing for you to yell about."

Pedro excused himself and hurried home. His feelings were hurt when Rusty lost his temper. He wanted everyone on the ranch to like him, and he thought that Rusty resented him.

When Pedro entered the small cottage that he and his parents lived in on the ranch, he saw that his parents were troubled. Big Joe hardly looked up to greet him, and his eyes were narrow with worry. The last time Pedro had seen his father look that way was before he got his wonderful job at the Diamond ranch. Now he had a good job. What had suddenly come up to put the dark thunder in Big Joe's face?

Pedro tended to his evening chores quietly. He knew better than to make any unnecessary noise at a moment like this one. He prepared his lessons as the teacher at the settlement schoolhouse had taught him. When he was through, he tied his books together with his reata. From the pitcher which sat on a table to the far side of the room, he poured water into a basin for his nightly washup. The gush of water into the pan made a noise like a waterfall in the too quiet room. Silently he kissed his mother and father good night, and said his prayers at the foot of his bed. He then curled up on the straw-filled mattress and in a short time breathed the heavy, steady sounds of one who is asleep.

His father walked over to his bed quietly and put his head close to the boy's body to listen for the sounds of sleeping.

"He is deep in his dreams," said Big Joe looking down at the boy fondly. "What a wonderful thing to have the cares of little ones who can close their eyes so quickly and get to sleep so fast."

Pedro opened one eye quickly. His father had moved back to the large wooden table in the center of their cottage. Pedro was about to apologize to his parents for not being able to fall asleep because he knew something was wrong. But his father had already begun to talk, and it was too late for interrupting.

"If I do not do as the rustler tells me, he says he will report me to the trail boss as one of the gang. It will be his word against mine, and since I am a new man here, they will never believe me." Big Joe sighed heavily. "What can I do? I have been slow to make friends with anyone on the ranch, because I didn't want to intrude. I do not know whom to turn to, because there is no one I know well enough to trust. The rustler himself is working side by side shows how to hypnotize in 30 seconds!

Yes, an amazing new method has been developed to bring on quick, easy induction of the hypnotic trance. Now, for the first time, you too can benefit from this recent discovery in hypnotic induction.

QUICK RESULTS

Want to hypnotize your friends? Your club members? HOW TO HYPNOTIZE is a remarkable primer that shows you just how to master the latest improved induction methods. The author, a widely experienced hypnotist and consultant, gives you the exact positions to take, the precise phraseology, all the steps necessary to hypnotize even the most difficult subjects.

EXCLUSIVELY

ENTIRELY NEW METHOD

Until recently the process of hypnotic induction was largely based on trial and error methods which succeeded mainly with subjects who were highly susceptible to hypnosis in the first place. The truth is that these highly susceptible subjects make up a very small percentage of the population. That is why amateurs and beginning hypnotists have so often been disappointed in their attempts at trance induction. Now, however, recent scientific research has developed ENTIRELY NEW METHODS that are not only sure fire in their results but quick and easy to achieve! For the first time, these new methods are presented in HOW TO HYPNOTIZE in language that you can easily and successfully follow on the very first reading!

SHOWS YOU STEP BY STEP

This book — which has been acclaimed by doctors and psychologists — is guaranteed to give you all the know-how necessary to induce the trance state in others. It not only explains the latest discoveries in hypnotic induction but it shows step by step, move by move, exactly how to bring on the trance; how to transform the trance into deeper and still deeper states; and how to terminate the trance quickly and effectively without any dangers whatsoever. You are even given alternative methods, so that you can actually choose the one that suits you best.

USED BY DOCTORS

The book that is being used by doctors and psychologists to learn hypnotic induction is now available to you with all of us, and there may be others here in his gang, too."

"What does the outlaw want you to do?" asked his wife.

"At night, when the cowboys are guarding herd and I am on watch, I must lead the steers to a gully where the rustlers will be waiting. The following day, I must act as if nothing has happened until the final night of roundup, when I am to set off a string of firecrackers to stampede the animals. The steers will break away and the rustlers will lie in wait to herd them into the gully and make off with them."

Pedro's heart beat fast as he pictured the danger of a stampede on the trail. And his own father might be the culprit to arrange this deed!

"What are you going to tell them?" asked Pedro's mother.

"I will say nothing to the rustlers. I will say nothing to the ranchers, for then I will be accused by the outlaw they know as a rustler myself. We must pack our goods and leave the Diamond ranch for another place where I may be able to get another job. Spring roundup starts the day after tomorrow. Tomorrow night we will pack our things and slip away quietly, making sure that no one watches."

The wonderful dream that Pedro had lived, crashed upon him as he lay huddled in his bed. Big Joe would no longer be working on the marvelous Diamond spread. He and his parents would know hard times again, as they wandered in loneliness across great distances without the comforts of this wonderful new home.

Pedro knew that he must do something to prevent this catastrophe. His first impulse was to run and tell his friend Tom. He must be more careful than that, he realized, because Big Joe had said that there were rustlers working the ranch. How could he be sure that even Tom was not in league with them? He thought very carefully of all the things Big Joe had said. Hopefully, he found a clue! Big Joe had been warned that the rustlers would tell the trail boss. Once he found out the name of the trail boss, he would go to him, for this was the only man to be counted on.

On his way home from the settlement school the following day, he stopped off at the kitchen and greeted the cookie with a cheerful Hello.

"Well, young fella, what can I do for you? The boys haven't come in from their chores yet, if you were hoping to find 'em around."

"Oh, it's you I really wanted to talk with," said Pedro. "I bet you've been on more roundups than the rest of 'em around here."

The cook was flattered, and he grinned in spite of himself.

"I guess I have been around for lots of excitement," he admitted.

"Do you know Tom, the trail boss, real well?"

"Course I do . . . 'ceptin' he isn't trail boss. He's usually drag man or point rider, I guess. Rusty's trail boss for roundups."

Pedro felt his knees fall out from under him. If there was anyone he would rather not approach, it was the sharp-tongued cowpoke who never had time to bother with kids. How would he ever be able to face him and ask for his help? Rusty might turn on his heel and walk away.

It would take a lot of courage, but it was worth it! Pedro stepped outside and kept his eyes posted for the ranchers' return. He stood outside the bunkhouse as one by one they filed through the door, most of them giving his head a rough but friendly pat as they strode by him.

Rusty was the last to come forward.

He squinted at Pedro through steely grey eyes. Not even the trace of a smile broke the corners of his mouth. And suddenly Pedro knew why he was the trail boss, a tough fellow who gave no quarter. He wasn't easy to make friends, because he had to know first who his friends really were, and he had to be sure.

Pedro stepped toward him and stared into his face with great seriousness. He slipped his reata from the school books and handed it to Rusty.

"Keep it," he said solemnly. "We are leaving for good. It is the only way for my father."

Rusty's big hands gripped the reata tightly. His weather-beaten face looked thoughtful.

"So they got to him, did they?" he muttered. "Probably threatened they'd turn tables, too, if he came to me."

Rusty's strong hand fell upon Pedro's shoulder. He stuffed the reata through his belt.

"Tell your pa I'll be paying a secret social call tonight. We'll map out our plans to frick the varmints. Should any of the boys wonder why I'm going there, I'll tell 'em you lost this lasso and I'm bringing it back. Start off now, before anyone gets suspicious. Vamoosel!"

As fast as his feet would take him, Pedro scampered for home . . . his home on the Diamond spread, for good!
